Ignoring the Future and Looking Fabulous

by Ray Songtree

She believes in over consumption. She believes in vanity. She spreads it to the populace and is supported in doing so. Over consumption is based on taking from others, who are left without enough. This is enforced by the military. Vanity leads to violence. Lipstick and War Crimes
Since we are all psychic, there is no such thing as intellectual property. Intellectual property is an oxymoron. The two words do not combine to make a rational statement because the intellect has no form, and property allegedly does. What intellectual property could mean is we don’t want others to take advantage of our work. It can also mean that a for-profit corporation registers whatever it wants and claims it has the legal right to restrict access. In this way nature and even creativity is being commodified. The law is based on an oxymoron.

Mission Statement: Kauai Transparency Initiative International believes that human nature is loving. “Right to know” leads to informed choice which leads to local stewardship. When government and industry are honest and open with citizens and consumers, people will naturally choose health for themselves and future generations. A mother protects her child. KTII exists to help causes that work for transparency and disclosure. The goal is an informed loving society on Kauai and afar, brought about by tipping society toward responsible awareness through honest education.

KTII was founded by Ray Songtree in 2011. See KTII.org.

Rock star Madonna makes a million dollars every 3 days. When we decry violence against women, why do we ignore puppets like Madonna? Is not violence against women the same as violence against everything? Can we stop supporting puppets, by not being puppets ourselves, and start to defend innocence?

Violence or innocence?
Lipstick and war crimes … or health?
Preface

The subject matter is so vast and comprehensive, and so close to home, that one wonders if this is a mystery thriller using the real world and our personal lives as subject matter, or a real investigation. This seems to be precisely what the author wants us to wonder, which makes the book more than entertainment and more than a documentary. It is truly a thriller, but fiction or not, the reader is left looking in the mirror to decide.

– Don Sullivan

This book represents two years of solid research and writing (and 7 years before that). This is Vol. 2 of the Lipstick and War Crimes Series. During these two years I hired Spanish translators so that the Spanish version Lápiz Labial & Crímenes de Guerra, could come out at almost same time as the English. With funds generated from book sales, a French edition for Africa will be next.

On the Table of Contents page we see singer Rihanna with phallic lipstick and Obama’s consultant Bilderberger, pedophile, and war criminal Henry Kissinger—seen right with U2 rock star, Bono. What is the relationship between entertainment and foreign policy?

“Tricia Jenkins, author of The CIA In Hollywood, told DailyMail.com she has recently acquired new evidence showing how the CIA worked off-the-books to influence Hollywood scripts to an extent never previously known. She said: ‘In this documentation, concerning one major Hollywood movie, it is clear that the CIA functioned as the principle partner in shaping the original script and its influence exceeded that which would have been filled by an aggressive producer or studio executive.’”

Volume 2 which you have before you, was originally the first book. However, I felt I needed to reach young people more directly and so I wrote A Thinking Girl’s Guide to Sexual Identity: Navigating heartbreak survival and the media matrix with various different titles and covers to reach a larger audience. Please, this was not to make money, but to help bring about the mission of tipping society toward informed choice though honest history.

Volume 1 exposes who was behind feminism, which is proven to be the CIA and the Rockefellers. Volume 1 shows how the entertainment industry has had a social engineering agenda. Specifically I aimed to wake up college girls. I do suggest, if you haven’t read Vol. 1, to download it for free from Lipstick-and-war-crimes.org or purchase it as paperback. If you are a woman, who taught you what it means to be a woman? It is shocking. If you are a man, there is a reason that relationships seem like a mine field.
Vol. 1 of the Lipstick and War Crimes Series is highly recommended to understand the depth of our social engineering. Our sexual identity is shown to be manipulated by change agents who call themselves “feminists.” The most famous female icons like Marilyn Monroe, Katherine Hepburn, Hillary Clinton, Beyoncé Knowles, Miley Cyrus, are shown to be placed puppets. This includes CIA employee Gloria Steinem and placed Oprah Winfrey. Vol. 1 is available free at www.lipstick-and-war-crimes.org as PDF or Ebook. The book The Manufacturing of a President by Wayne Madsen connects the dots to show us Barack Obama’s CIA past. Obama’s birth certificate was photoshopped as investigators have proved.

He is a manchurian candidate, carefully sold to us the way con-artists please us with a gift. Please download Vol. 1 for free, or purchase the paperback.

The following image is from Vol. 1 of Lipstick and War Crimes. Photo shows Obama Sr. arriving from Africa to Hawaii and greeted by CIA agent Stanley Dunham, Obama’s grandfather.
Obama's parents obviously did not meet in a Russian language class. Every single thing we ever heard about Obama was a fabrication, including this one from controlled Wikipedia.

“1961: Dunham and Obama Sr. were married on the Hawaiian island of Maui on February 2, 1961, despite parental opposition from both families.” What a lie, it was an arranged marriage, and that is why the loveless marriage, and the scheduled convenient divorce, was not contested by Obama Sr. who was a cover for Barack’s real father, Frank Marshall Davis. See deeper discussion here. [26]

Photos below from Frank Marshall Davis’s collection, show us that Ann Durham, Obama’s mother, was not some innocent hippie anthropologist. This shows that she was involved with sexual beta kitten programming to destroy sexual inhibitions, as are most female agents. There is some evidence she was given to Davis at age 13. Like Shirley MacLaine, who we will meet shortly, Anne was given over to CIA programs by her CIA dad Stanley Dunham, for beta training to be described soon. Obama had a male nanny who was a transexual. This was a CIA selection to strip him of clear polarity. If one thinks there is no such thing as male and female, then there is no basis for up and down, in or out, or right and wrong either. If nothing is clear, everything is blurred.
All the titles for Volume 1, above, are the same book with different introductions.

Volume 1 exposes how our sexual identity has been targeted and confused and why. Specifically, the phenomenon of feminism is exposed. Persons introduced include “Mother of Feminism” CIA agent Gloria Steinem, Miley Cyrus, Jane Fonda, Albert Einstein, Madonna, Obama and his true father, Shirley MacClaine, lesbian Katherine Hepburn, Henry Kissinger, secret elitist Oprah Winfrey, Alice Walker, CIA Hugh Hefner, Kate Upton, Warren Beatty, Katy Perry, Soviet defector Yuri Bezmenov, Hillary Clinton, Beyoncé Knowles, Papua New Guinea, Jay-Z, Marilyn Monroe, Gaga, Warren Buffet, Shakira, Kristina Aguilera, Hero Cathy O’Brien, Fukushima, Pharrel Williams, Angelina Jolie, Bill Gates, Elizabeth Taylor, Nelson Mandela…

To right, author Ray Songtree and USS Liberty survivor, Richard Larry Weaver, who discovered that the submarine USS Amberjack fired a torpedo and hit his ship in the infamous false flag attack of June 8, 1967 off the Gaza coast that was blamed solely on Israel. (Both Israel and USA receive orders from same globalists.) Larry has had 36 surgeries. The Great Spirit brought us together. Larry’s Mother-in-Law and my Mom were friends at an elderly accommodations on Maui. His story is in Lipstick and War Crimes: Vol. 5. Larry does not endorse all statements in this book. I include this photo of Richard Larry Weaver to honor and thank him for his whistleblowing and to acknowledge the mysterious spirit that brought us together for our common work of seeking truth and justice. The reader can hear his radio interview at link below.

A note here about my style … I write in the first person because I am tired of authors who try to convince us of “the truth” without exposing their process. My process is exploratory. I am a seeker, not a know-it-all.

There was a book, Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance. I liked that title and thought I would spin it off, with, what some would say, something more serious. You see, Buddhism is deprogramming, so what does Zen and the Art of De-programming mean?

Let’s first ask, what does word Zen means? Alan Watts, an alcoholic, wrote books about Zen. One of the vows of a monk is no substances. Suzuki Roshi started Zen Center in San Francisco. Zen is a word not much used, it seems, in Japan. Zendo means a meditation hall and zazen means sitting mediation, or sitting/dropping the chatter box mind.

Zen practice is about quieting down. Dropping the scripted mind is also de-programming. Thus, Zen is de-programming. We don’t lose our minds, we lose our prejudice and conditioning. We learn to stop habitually identifying everything. We connect quietly, instead of being disconnected by divide and conquer classification. We are no longer authorities who can brag about what we can name. In getting clear, we don’t become unconscious, we become more conscious because we are not interpreting, we are seeing and connecting. This is the effort of seekers who seek to see into the unnamable. Krishnamurti called it “freedom from the known.” You see, culture is the known. What do we find when we drop the familiar from our minds? We still have a mind, but it is more empty of the programming.

Kobun Chino Roshi, who you will meet soon, said, “Emptiness is compassion.”

So, now the reader understands what it is that we find when we de-program.

As we drop the fences of self, we find the inclusion of other. This is not an intellectual matter. A bubble of our psychic make-up dissolves. Satori. Sudden enlightenment. Or for some, we could call it grace. (There is no end to enlightenment or grace.) No amount of reading will bring awakening. In reading, we collect clues. To use these clues to quiet down and stop collecting is one of the goals of this series. We don’t need so much stuff.

Our culture used to be what elders passed on to us orally, memorized by heart. The culture today is an organized entertainment/political/educational/corporate/scientific association, all enslaved by money interests, that thrives on “growth” at the expense of other peoples’ homelands. Our wins depend on losers, which is flippantly called “collateral damage.” Most of us are programmed to think we are advancing, but there is no evidence of this, environmentally or morally. That is, I am saying that “progress” is a lie. A programmed lie. This materialistic cultural constellation of associations is now where we get our tradition, and this association holds in place our cultural norms, our sense of direction and coordinates of understanding.

Obviously, deprogramming from a system that accepts collateral damage is wise.

This interconnected association named above, intentionally brain washes us from infancy to think we are living in an era of “growth” when everyone understands that the economy is a ponzi scheme and the future is grim for too many billions of people. But we are taught to ignore the future and look fabulous.

This association is dedicated to a game of one world government and mono-culture. Anyone with any sense feels, “We are in trouble and we have to do something about the future!” Here we see how we are programmed. “We” in this statement means one world government. We are brain washed to be globalists. We should be saying, “I should do something sustainable for my community.” My responsibility. Me. What can I do? It is up to me to be responsible, not the make-believe “we,” which really equals one world government. There is no global “we.” “Humanity” is another programmed lie. No one will ever see or hear or touch humanity. The word is a globalist projection.

There is a very real political agenda that does not want anyone to explore the spiritual, the un-nameable. We are to be locked into a machine education to need the machine. Independent indigenous people are now being brought into the “formal economy” and homogenized. We are taught that this destruction of cultural diversity is “progress.” This hides the collateral damage. Modern culture is based on conquest through deception and the organizers are hidden as part of the deception. This series will make this very obvious. As you read, the programmed sheeple person within you will whither. This will be shocking for some, but you are not alone. The woman and man within you will stand up.

I am not any religion. I am a seeker, as I said. For those unfamiliar with Buddhism, here is an extremely brief introduction …

Dukkha (Pāli; Sanskrit: dukkha; Tibetan: sdug bsgal, pr. “duk-ngel”) is a Buddhist term commonly translated as “suffering,” “anxiety,” “stress,” or “unsatisfactoriness.” The principle of dukkha is one of the most important concepts in the Buddhist tradition. Buddha is reputed to have said: “I have taught one thing and one thing only, dukkha and the cessation of dukkha.”

Dukkha is commonly explained according to three categories:

- The unavoidable physical and mental suffering associated with birth, growing old, illness, dying, and separation from loved ones.
- The anxiety of trying to hold on to anything, because all is constantly changing, so we can’t hold it.
- A basic unsatisfactoriness pervading all forms of existence, because all forms are changing, decaying, turning to rust, impermanent and without any inner core or substance, and therefore, without a mission of compassion, we personally experience one loss after another and suffer.
In my opinion the three most well known de-programmers of our era are Buddha, Jesus, and Lao Tsu. There are many others. Moses channeled an entity who was into blood sacrifice and called himself a jealous god. For those who become defensive with those words, these words are undeniable, as it is the Biblical fact. Mohammed was a channeler, as was Mormonism’s Joseph Smith. In my opinion Judaism, Islam and Mormonism do not have the detached altruism of the three great de-programmers, Buddha, Jesus and Lao Tsu. In contrast, Judaism, Islam and Mormonism taught tribalism. They are channeled belief systems, not helping us de-program from belief systems. Buddha, Jesus and Lao Tsu were de-programmers. They led us to the experience of connecting and seeing.

Zen is a school of Mahayana Buddhism that originated in China during the Tang dynasty as “Chán.” It was influenced by Taoism. Bodhidharma, a practitioner from India, was a founder who came to China in the fifth century A.D. Quintessential to Zen Buddhism may be the Flower Sermon, the earliest source in China seems to be in the 10th century (1500 years after Buddha, therefore, a story). This story tells that Buddha Sakyamuni gathered his disciples one day for a dharma talk. Instead of speaking, Buddha was completely silent and some of the monks speculated that perhaps he was tired or ill. Buddha then silently held up a flower. Several disciples were preoccupied in their heads, trying to interpret what this meant. Buddha remained silent. One disciple, Mahākāśyapa, silently gazed at the flower and smiled. He was not at a dharma talk, he was with the flower. Buddha acknowledged Mahākāśyapa as being able to see.

“Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they do not toil nor do they spin, yet I say to you that not even Solomon in all his glory clothed himself like one of these.” – Jesus

For myself, Jesus and Buddha are not far apart, because I don’t feel that love and compassion are far apart. When we drop programming, we can see.

“Hatred will not cease by hatred.”

– Sakyamuni Buddha

Jesus stands out more as a warrior, at least for me, and Buddha more as a wise man. We are told Jesus died in his early thirties. Buddha lived into his 80s. Buddha took on the slave system of Brahmanism. In Brahmanism, purity was juxtaposed with the impure. To keep one side pure, the other side had to be consigned to squaller. The untouchables cleaned up everyone else’s shit. They were treated like shit too. So the “pure” people lived like entitled abusers and were parasitic. What is pure about that? Buddha condemned the caste system. His teaching was too free for actually any tradition, so India over the centuries, returned to its caste ways and Buddhism moved on to Sri Lanka, Burma, Thailand, Vietnam, Korea, Tibet, China, and Japan.

Buddhism is a spiritual practice of people who renounce the worldly world. For this reason, no family or community tradition can be Buddhist, because family is in this world. What was arranged over time was a relationship between the highly esteemed monks and nuns, and the lay people. They had a symbiotic relationship, not a hierarchal parasitic relationship. Of course, this was never perfect.
Buddha’s last words are significant. Whereas we are told that Jesus forgave the beasts that were torturing and murdering him, Buddha gave a last word of advice to those close to him. The furthest thing he wanted to leave was a program. So his last words were “Be a light on to yourselves.”

Six hundred years after Buddha died and a large desert apart, Jesus took on the satanists who were spreading and growing through the Roman Empire, which celebrated torture and death in coliseums. Rome was built upon slavery, and people were kept dumbed down with cruel entertainment. As with the sadistic Brahmans, there was nothing great about Rome, which was built on death and rape. Sexuality was hierarchal and not based on love. Abuse was on the rise and Jesus seems to have taken his birth here to stand up to this cruelty. In a perfect storm, Roman cruelty had met Judaism which was into animal sacrifice and the co-opt of a multi-verse, into a monotheism. Or course at the top of the monotheism was the priesthood. So Jesus birthed into this storm of cruelty and walls against kindness that protect vanity and abuse. He came to deprogram.

The times and missions of these two brothers were different. Buddha came to make things clear. Jesus came to make things good. Compassion is more clear than love, because compassion doesn’t want anything. Love is more ardent than compassion because love has an emotional component of loyalty to it. Loyalty can become a twisted attachment, and Buddhism tries to be clear of attachment. But detachment is detached. In my opinion, Jesus gives us a focus to face down evil because his love is attached to goodness. Buddha offers a path that doesn't face down evil, it undercuts it, and thus avoids conflict. Both paths are worthy in my opinion. Both these great de-programmers walk together in promoting kindness and they can be seen as brothers in kindness.

“Emptiness is compassion.”
– Kobun Chino Roshi

Kobun Chino Roshi was a Buddhist monk from Japan who had an experience of awakening (a window had begun to open) and was brought to California by Suzuki Roshi in the 1960’s. Kobun released me as his equal when I was in my twenties. I am not a “zen master” because he knew I didn't need his tradition. (I don't know if he was correct.)

As I see it, we all have three directions we can take. We can work to gain the illusion of power (vanity). Or we can work to escape, escape, escape. (Alcoholics, drug-aholics, foodies, sex-aholics, sports-aholics, web-aholics, many meditators, and those who crave heaven, salvation, or moksha.) Or we can seek a life of service.

I urge the reader to please consider the latter.

Kobun was my elder, and of course, he gave me many things. Mostly he let me know that what I was experiencing was within human experience. I needed this reassurance.

I gave him inspiration three times that I know about. First, on the phone, he mentioned that I could use my mind to affect the weather. I found that idea to be taboo and he took pause. Another time, after my divorce, he offered condolences, and I let him know immediately that there was no place for attachment. The last time was at a pizza place in Santa Cruz, and I declined a beer. I said, “I don't drink.” I learned afterwards that he quit drinking.
It is a personal loss that I never was able to speak with him as a mature man, as he did with his sensei. Those who think Kobun died accidentally in Switzerland are mistaken. The practicing, card carrying bankster satanists who controlled and killed Steve Jobs of Apple Inc. also killed Kobun Chino Roshi. I am not into coincidence theory. The reader is about to learn that satanism is not a metaphor.
When I talk about problems of world to most Christians, they instantly throw up their hands and tell me that God will take care of it. They seem to be saying that their faith is now simply “waiting.” We have to ask, “Is this being responsible?” Did Jesus really say that he or some father figure is responsible for our actions, or, am I responsible for my actions? I’ll tell a true story that will be disconcerting from some. Please understand I am not questioning anyone’s faith, I am highlighting the orientation of our faith.

The main English Bible for over three centuries was the King James version. The influence of this version on English speaking culture cannot be underestimated. King James made sure this Bible would reflect political views such as ordained ministry and more. King James was a member of a secret society called Freemasonry. He is recorded as entering Freemason and Fellowcraft of the Lodge of Scoon on April, 1601. The Freemasons/Rosicrucians were dedicated to a hierarchical concept of God that would justify their top/down control of society. This was symbolized by a pyramid with an all-seeing-eye. They, the rich, would wisely rule over the masses. And their concept of God was seed for this model. King James hired another Freemason, Sir Francis Bacon, to compile 54 disparate translations, and write in his own style The King James Bible. (See www.sirbacon.org) Bacon’s editing took more than a year. This is not mentioned in Wikipedia, which the series will show gives an intentionally censored history. Sir Francis Bacon put together, according to his understanding, the King James Bible.

Both James and Bacon were Freemasons before and after the new Bible was produced. Did either of them understand the word “God” they way Jesus would have wanted us to? Did we inherit their message, or the message of Jesus? We have to ask this, as our faith is on the line. 350 years as THE English Bible is a long time. During the life of this version, the English empire brought this version of “God” around the world.

While empire destroyed cultures, Jesus said that the rich don’t have a chance (Mathew 19:24, Mark 10:25, Luke 18:25). Today we have perhaps two billion people calling themselves “Christian” and dreaming of wealth. Did the orientation of our faith get mixed up? Are we now more devoted to consumerism and resulting pollution, than to simplicity and purification?

Jesus taught, by his example, to confront corruption. Very few people will now raise their voices. Are we “waiting” for God to take care of society’s problems, problems that will wreck our own children and grandchildren?

“So he made a whip out of cords, and drove all from the temple area, both sheep and cattle; he scattered the coins of the money changers and overturned their tables.” John 2:15

A friend who taught Bible studies wrote to me …

“I think the major issue with Christians I know today is that they are only concerned with their own salvation. What goes on in the world doesn’t matter—they are “not of this world” [but keep impacting it]. They are “saved,” so for them it is fruitless to worry about the planet, the evil among us, etc. Furthermore, they will tell us that salvation is “by faith, not by works, that any man should boast.” (Eph. 2:9)

“However, they need to carefully re-read James 2:14-19

“What good is it, my brothers and sisters, if someone claims to have faith but has no deeds? Can such faith save them? Suppose a brother or a sister is without clothes and daily food. If one of you says to them, “Go in peace; keep warm and well fed,” but does nothing about their physical needs, what good is it? In the same way, faith by itself, if it is not accompanied by action, is dead.” – NIV

“They should also read Jesus’s admonishment to the church in Sardis in Rev. 3:1-2 … “I know your deeds; you have a reputation for being alive, but you are dead. Wake up! Strengthen what remains and is about to die, for I have not found your deeds complete in the sight of my God.” – NIV

“These are just thoughts that came to me, that helped turn my head when I was a ‘lazy saved Christian.’

In this series, you will learn that almost all institutions have been subverted for a long time. An example that is very obvious is the environmental movement. If you do a search for “Sierra Club Fukushima” you will find the Sierra Club has not issued one word about the EPA raising its level for dangerous radiation as a response to the worst meltdown in history. Not only that, but the EPA shut down radiation monitoring stations! The Audubon Society hasn’t peeped. Nor has World Wildlife Fund. This is just one example of how institutions are co-opted, and Churches have been subverted also.

A survey published in August 1988 by the Association of North American Missions revealed that most Christians care little about the needs of the Church. “People are placing a higher value on their lifestyle than on the their spirituality.” (1985 Annual Report of the Association of North American Missions). Much of this attitude of selfishness and indifference has flourished because most Christian denominations have been penetrated by materialistic Masons. Tom C. McKenney, co-author of The Deadly Deception, revealed a shocking statistic. In July 1989 McKenney named the two largest Protestant denominations in the United States, and said, “Through our best estimates, 90 percent of one and 70 percent of the other have pastors who are members of the Masonic Lodge.”

– www.goodnewsaboutgod.com/studies/spiritual/home_study/church_destroy.htm

Masons reading this will see their symbols used by a corrupt music industry. Why? The same penetration can be noticed with most modern institutions. Recent “movements” like Feminism or New Age came from where? We will study this. Who controlled the new churches that have risen in last century? Someone or no one? Who funded their growth? Most Christians understand there is a Satanic force, but few understand that there is an actual Satanic cult that organizes crimes like pedophilia and human trafficking (and worse) and this cult includes the richest most powerful councils in the world.
An example of this wolf in sheep’s clothing is the United Nations, a Rothschild/Rockefeller creation. They created the UN after their League of Nations failed. The United Nations’ goal is one world government, or, the all-seeing-eye. Even fewer understand that well known individual leaders of our political system are part of this circle of crime. The only way these famous people were promoted is that they went along. I will prove this to you.

In this series inconvenient truths keep popping up. I have seen videos online that discuss the history which I reveal, but some of these videos also attack Jesus. The Zeitgeist films were notorious. There is another called Ring of Power that claims Jesus was son of Julius Caesar, and both had initials JC. The video producers forgot that Jesus is a more modern pronunciation. Their theories are trash, but 90% of the history they reveal is true. What this means is we need to be very discerning.

Virtue is being attacked by the same entertainment industry and media and now new laws, all in the name of freedom of course. Good has been transformed to “anything goes.” And Christianity is targeted too, as the next image shows.

Well, let’s ask, “Did our faith, one way or another, drift away from purification, simplicity, and activism?”

For those who identify the crimes of our times, and how much of our culture is controlled by the criminals, we see that this negative force hates virtue, hates Jesus, and is trying to undermine families and church communities. (In fact it is undermining all families and communities.) The Lipstick and War Crimes Series outlines and illustrates this hate of virtue, which we now call pop culture. The assault against virtue parallels the assault on Christianity. The talking points of this attack are pluralism and tolerance. Since Christians draw a line in the sand, Christians are framed as haters. For example, if I say that there is a difference between a man and a woman, I will be called a hater. If I say that there is a natural polarity between women and men, and that denying this polarity is aberrant, I will be called a hater. Indeed, if I call anything aberrant, I will be called a hater.

For myself, who had interactions with Jesus without studying in any church, the popularized hate of Jesus by the negative side is a big endorsement of Christians. I have studied many paths, but I notice that I am on the same side as the Christian community in the fight for preserving family values.

“… For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God …” – 2 Timothy 3:1-4

In general, it is my desire to leave the reader with questions that will bring about new thoughts. I feel that when we research truth for ourselves, we wake up to becoming better people.

I honestly believe that you will stand up and save your community.
Left, hate of Jesus. Right, sadomasochism and bondage celebrated as "gay."

Above Youtube screenshot, we see a talent show contestant on national TV in UK with a crucifix microphone and a satanic skull. What is the message here about goodness or respect for Christianity?
Included here, the Introduction to

The Indigenous Edition of Vol. 1

This edition is specifically for indigenous descendants, mostly Native Americans, but also Pacific Islanders, Australians, South Americans, Africans, and Asians.

“Indigenous Recall” has two meanings. Indigenous people are asking that the broken defective dominant culture be recalled as a defective product. The other meaning is they have to recall, recollect who they really want to be. “Indigenous Recall” places First Nation people as central, which I believe they are. Technological, disassociated people will be dinosaurs soon.

“The Return to Sanity” will have meaning when the criminals at the top are exposed for all to see. “Return to Sanity” also refers to rolling back the insane for-profit industrial lifestyle, which has no future because of resource depletion. People who are worried about over population don’t understand what Monsanto or Bill Gates or Apple Inc. are about. Without doubt, population will decline due to all the poisons and wireless frequencies that have already been deployed. Steve Jobs was murdered to get his conscience out of way of Apple’s push for dangerous wireless technology. (See www.bioinitiative.org) Apple Inc. no longer offers a wired keyboard for example, and Cloud technology makes us dependent on dangerous wireless technology.

My Japanese sensei, Kobun Chino Roshi, who was also Steve Job’s sensei, was drown to eliminate his influence on Jobs’ conscience. Doctors who have cures for cancer are getting murdered to insure cancer kill rate (See http://whale.to/a/persecuted_doc_h.html and BurzynskiMovie.com) Of course, murder and genocide is well known to indigenous peoples. However, and this is important, we are all at risk now.

Stolen generations, Australia and Pennsylvania, images from Vol. 2 of Lipstick and War Crimes. Now children are being stolen by schools and media because parents are asleep.
What do you see in this picture? Do you see a woman looking up at a didgeridoo?

This series will wake you up so you learn to see how we are tricked and socially engineered. The photo is of a young woman being trained to be a sex slave. She has on lipstick and makeup, so she is looking for attention. She is Asian so the target of photo shoot is Asian girls. She is holding a phallus between her legs and her mouth is open for oral sex. This is the subliminal message. And this message is effective. This is what our young people are exposed to.

When our attention remains below the waist, we might not question who controls the direction of society. This is intentional.

It is up to we who are awake, as their community, to shield young people and give them the smarts to avoid this kind of psychological manipulation.

Since many people have lost inner guidelines, promiscuity brings the “school of hard knocks,” but the “free sex” itself is not questioned. If people were moral and chaste, there would be little crime, and the State would have no excuse for more regulations. Therefore, a totalitarian regime that wants as much coercion as possible, encourages excess, greed, and lust, rather than inner restraint. The more lack of control within, the more justification there is for political control.

To illustrate this, lets ask, “Why in over ten years, has the U.S. Department of Homeland Security not made a dent on drugs entering country?” This is because drugs, like certain diseases, are allowed and sanctioned. Opium production in Afghanistan under U.S is high not low. The government itself runs drugs to keep society unstable and needy. Failure and chaos justify more police, so instead of protecting our borders, Homeland Security is really a police state for the homeland, frisking as many as possible.

Allowing crime enables enforcement.

For our entire lives, the entertainment industry has run “free sex” values to create more immorality and less inner integrity. The goal is a society where people depend on outer government laws to govern them. This reinforces need for “more security.” So, promiscuity is a sophisticated road to enslavement under a government that will “take care of you.” Promoted contraception and promiscuity has intentionally created a population of children without committed fathers and without a strong family. In their minds, Big Brother will provide.

Authentic indigenous cultures don’t train their girls to be sex toys. Sex means motherhood. Ancient cultures know what is sacred. The road to healing our communities will require a rejuvenated ancient culture that is connected, not disconnected. As stated in mission statement, human nature is loving. “Original sin” was invented by Emperor Augustine. Our nature is loving because our natural state is connected …

Now, let’s explore the disconnection …
A friend invited me to the Big Island of Hawaii for a dawn ceremony at top of Mauna Kea volcano. We flew over from Kauai and met some men who said they were descendants of Ali‘i, the old royalty. They were drinking alcohol near some tide pools. The dawn ceremony had perhaps 35 people attend. No Hawaiians were there except family members of the hosts. The rest, perhaps 50%, were White, like we two from Kauai. After the ceremony, listening to people talking, I learned it was all about getting grant money from the NASA observatory.

Most readers here are non-indigenous. We are disconnected. We have no homeland or ecology. We move to where we can find a job, and see the Earth as scenery, not a place where we grow, hunt, or gather sustenance. Nature is for recreation, not living and dying. The ‘aina (the land-spirit-environment in Hawaiian) is a place to take photos. Our actual home is in a place called Sidewalk-Anywhere.

There are also people of native blood reading this who think of themselves as indigenous, but live exactly like non-indigenous people. Let’s get very real. We are our lifestyles, not how we fantasize. Everyone needs to stop dreaming of entitlements, which only take us further from our roots. To survive in a century with depleted resources and coming shortages we will need to recall how to produce with our own hands. A natural authentic indigenous person doesn’t take handouts because they are not part of the something-for-nothing system. They are producers. We need to become indigenous if we want a sustainable future for the next generation. Too many people are pretending to be natives.

The present global technological civilization, with 3.5 million people in cities, is unsustainable and will fail. We all know this but live in denial like some miracle will save the day. The elite, who are planning ahead, are ignoring environmental diseases like Alzheimer’s and Autism. Slow kill wireless frequency is being pushed globally, as are dangerous unneeded vaccines.
In the elite timeline, there will be nothing natural or indigenous left. Their high tech civilization with far fewer people, who are under their complete control, is their sustainable plan. They will bring down the population intentionally. Slow kill operations are already taking their toll. The rate of cancer and genetic diseases will sky rocket as the graphs show. Please see what is written on the pregnant woman’s tummy on front cover of this book.

There are still authentic indigenous people who get food and water from the land. They are being eliminated as quickly as possible by the “market” and school curriculums (World Bank ‘Early Childhood Initiative’ promoted by singer sex-object Shakira, Vol. 3). Native natural people are considered to be an obstacle to “progress” by World Bank. Here the non-indigenous reader probably agrees with the elite. You probably discount indigenous people who “don’t matter.” This is because you live in Sidewalk-Anywhere. Be careful. I am going to show how we have been socially engineered to support destruction. In doublespeak, “progress” means destruction.

Yet, a part of us feels something deeper than tolerating destruction. Nature is natural and is our Mother. We want connection. In contrast, the artificial is unnatural and is our enemy. Inside we know this. The way out of destruction is to go back to innocence, not to try to fix insane “progress” with something new that is also unnatural. A drug won’t cure a drug.

In nature there are no “clean freaks” who use toxic chemicals to sterilize their homes. There is no stigma against dirty fingernails or crooked teeth. Walking barefoot is okay. Most of us hate nature. We hate the Earth and don’t want to get close to her. We were steered this way.
Shakira, a Colombian singer with dyed blond hair, covered extensively in Vol. 3 of series, was invited by World Bank to promote “Early Childhood Initiative” education in order to globalize all children and bring all cultures into the “formal economy” of debt. The Common Core U.S. School Curriculum by Bill Gates Sr., a former Planned Parenthood head, will be merged with a global education system to create global mono-culture and destroy regional and indigenous diversity. This is already happening. Shakira claimed on The Voice talent contest to have 70 million Facebook followers. Here we see the values being promoted worldwide by Obama and World Bank.

If we stay below the waist, we might not notice who is governing us.
The attack on indigenous people is mirrored by the attack on the natural within us all. This is a big realization that all of us, whatever our race, can share. This attack is organized. Just as the British Empire was the business model of the banksters who controlled Britain (Vol. 2), the world wide assault on the natural is a plan, a program. Why is the World Bank involved with global education? It is to further colonize the entire world’s minds. We are being steered.

Pop culture, though foreign to some readers, infects all children through images, like the one above of the young Asian woman. We need an alternative to “entertainment.” We need to create this alternative for the next generation. The globe is now controlled by pop culture.

My visit to the far north of Australia a few years ago, to be with native people on their 40,000 year old homeland, went well. All doors opened. I found myself led mysteriously to meet some of the few activists I had seen on videos online. However, I was a stranger. I did not know their language. (Actually their town of 700 people spoke 9 languages.) Why should they trust me, when their grandparents were massacred and a cell tower was built over the grave?

To my surprise, there was nothing I could help them with because they were on welfare and had no motivation to do anything. They owned almost nothing because if they owned, say a knife, they would have to lend it when asked, and so they didn’t have a knife. They had welfare.

No one could afford a vehicle, so they would have gambling nights, and the winner might win $20,000 with which they would buy a Toyota in Darwin that they would share with their extended family until the washboard roads destroyed the rig a year later. They looked forward to factory built vehicles, not to a sustainable future. Natural life is tough. Mosquitoes are waiting. The easy way is welfare. In nature extra energy is not wasted. Because of the outside input from industrialization, we all take a shortcut. Native American plains people adopted canvas tipis. It was easier than bison hides. Energy must be conserved. But what about the future?

In Arnhemland, I met “traditional land owners” who were given this title by the Australian government. Divide and conquer begins with private property. The “traditional land owners” were approached and persuaded to sell some land, so the government could build a police compound and a prison in their own town. This was the next step of empire. Australia, hardly a sovereign country, was going to bring civilization to the heart of Arnhemland, and that meant the dominant culture’s laws and police. I was adopted by this family, but my respect drifted away when I saw how they had betrayed their own people.
I saw first hand how a people can be demoralized. The Yolngu of the far North had met their first white man only 85 years ago. This is how they were assimilated … young men were flown around the world as musicians in the 70’s. They returned globalized, non-indigenous.

The grocery stores now sell blue soda pop. There was no alcohol in this part of Australia, but they had kava. It is a prison camp. The people have no representation. There is no officially recognized self-rule. In angry reaction, there is an underground force. This force is disconnected from the female elders. There was spirit possession and murder. There was also a Christian community, which didn’t confront anything as it was led by disconnected Whites. (See introduction to Christian Edition at Lipstick-and-war-crimes.org, free.) There was also real faith. One man I loved, had it. He, by the way, became a grandfather when he was 28.

Girls become women as soon as their nipples come out. My daughter was only 7 so she was underage. Arranged marriage based on a complex totem system is the tradition, but with pop music and movies (which we will review in this series) another new norm is now unmitigated sexual attraction. (Sound familiar? This is globalism.) My lovely friends met at a K-Mart in Darwin. But they took the relationship very seriously and were very loyal. They had found real love and integrity. Their young teen son was flown to Melbourne for a field trip by school system to help assimilate him and make him globalized, non-indigenous.

The one elder who recognized me, asked me to stay and help the elders who had been crushed by “The Intervention.” This 2007 government intervention, (now officially called “Stronger Futures,” which is doublespeak for weaker futures) lied in media about extent of child molestation, and invaded reserves with armed troops “to save the children.” It was a cultural assault, hidden as a “humanitarian intervention,” a common ploy of Western hegemony. (Our soft side is invoked to justify bombs. Thus, U.S. has been in scores of wars in last 50 years. Saving others means obliterating them, as in Libya.) In Arnhemland, Empire wants the minerals. I told this elder that all the white people here were also slaves. This was new idea for him. So he asked me to help out, but I had a child with me and needed to go, and I was disheartened by what I saw. My mission there, to connect with something ancient, would take a new form of being an advocate for a goal that is the opposite of global. I am now an advocate for what is most worthwhile, something local.

I did learn remarkable things. The people there never speak the name of someone who has died. Imagine how free of history and its prejudices they are! The dead are left to re-birth and are not disturbed. We hunted crabs in the mangroves, and when I told my friends that I don’t normally eat the guts, they asked “Why not?” No need for plates or silverware; the kangaroo or goose is thrown directly on the fire and is eaten with hands. No furniture, what for? To be far from the Earth? The invasive out of control Asian water buffalo are slaughtered by government with helicopters. I see in future that the bulldozed garbage pits will be used to trap buffalo. Water buffalo meat is so tough it can hardly be eaten, but a new aboriginal lifestyle will evolve around this meat source. The buffalo wipe out the billabongs (ponds and lakes). Invasive cane toads are poisonous, and have killed off other sources of food. The ecology is changing and so will the aboriginal lifestyle. And the mosquitoes are waiting.

I learned there are spirits who are territorial. When I entered the reserve I did my own ceremony. I didn’t realize that the reserve was so big that I would have had to do a ceremony for each location. I was attacked by spirit for my error. This was new for me. I had not encountered entities like this before. My local friends encountered them daily and were afraid to go out at night. The spiritual leaders have lost power. The people are prey.

On the reserve there are continual meetings with mining representatives who want to strip mine the land for aluminium (Australian spelling). The place was overrun by White people who were there for all kinds of “humanitarian” reasons. Most are there to make as much money as possible as contractors, just like Iraq. They act polite. They respect nothing but their own wallet. So again, the example for the natives is that White people can’t be trusted.

When I returned to Hawaii, someone I know, who was adopted into the Lakota Tribe, told me his best friend was murdered with a knife by his son, who was having sex with his own mom. When the father confronted the son, he was killed. Utter madness. When I told someone I had been in Australia with Aboriginals, he told me about the incest discussed openly at Pueblo meetings in New Mexico. He wanted to know if things were as dysfunctional where I had visited.

I told him that all this dysfunction was planned. Of course bringing casinos into Native American reserves would bring prostitution and graft. Of course drugs are furnished, just like in African American communities. Of course outside jobs created a disparity in lifestyles and jealousy and the community loses cohesion. Or course home rule and real power have been stripped from the people so they could fit into the puppet countries that we call “nations,” most created by the British for the UN. And so, of course, there is little social order. In nature the community self regulates with a diversity of wisdom and perspective. In broken communities, disfunction runs rampant until the police state steps in. As stated, illicit sexuality is a tool to bring about political dominance. Internal regulation and conscience needs support. Break the community and the individual is adrift. Then we experiment, and now we have half our kids without a committed father. Take a deep breath. So what do we do? Who will be society’s elders?

Each of us, no matter what our ethnic background may be, need to realize that factory items will become unaffordable. Already, a bankrupt financial system holds itself up with lies. In U.S., 47 million people are on food stamps while jobs are out-sourced. Over 100 million Americans receive some kind of government support. The Social Security system goes into more debt each year. It must fail. I knew this when I was a teenager, that by the time I could receive social security, the system would be broken. We all know this.

Those that are living closer to nature and to the side of the doomed dominant culture, offer the viable alternative. This fact must stay in our minds and plans. Indigenous people need to teach their children as much of the old ways as possible; not just ceremonies, but skills. They also need to be open to teachers of skills from other races and tribes. Non-indigenous people need to connect with the farmers and ranchers and indigenous of your area because they know the land. You probably don’t. Your world will fail, but nature will still be here.

The Maori of New Zealand knew over 400 plants. They knew every plant in their area. Of course they did. They had no sidewalks.

When I visited Hotevilla in Hopi-land Arizona, in the early 70s, I fetched water for Grandpa David from a spring. When I went back later there was a tall water tower. I couldn’t remember if it had been there the first time or not. The water tower is run on electric pumps with parts that will become unavailable. It is just a matter of time. The pumped water allowed the town to grow beyond its natural size. Even in Hopi-land, there needs to be people who know the old ways and live to the side of the dominant convenient culture.

All this is daunting, of course. However, you the reader can wake up. We have been colonized. Our minds and values and hopes and dreams have been colonized. We think the Earth is dirty, but it is not, it is the Earth. We can peel back the colonization and get back to the root of our human experience. There is still wilderness and we must visit it soon, alone, and with patience. When we touch the Earth, we need to touch her as a family member, not a tourist. We can plant something. We can harvest it. We can learn to store food. Humans are omnivores. We can learn what to do if there is no toilet paper or matches in the store.

Vol. 1 of the Lipstick and War Crimes Series, starts to connect how the attack on our inner virtue parallels the attack on the environment and anyone who lives naturally. Purification in a time of imperialistic mono-culture means diversification and autonomy. Something disconnected with nature can be re-connected. The solution is old and simple.
